

About Susan

SUSAN GRAHAM WHITE is a leading dressage competitor, trainer, teacher, and judge. She has been a USEF-licensed dressage judge since 1983 and an eventing judge since 1986. She is an FEI eventing judge, as well as a USEF-licensed eventing judge. Susan has judged over 200 USEF/USEA recognized competitions, plus more than 40 international events, including the 2006 and 2007 North American Young Riders Championships and Scotland's Blair International in 2006.

An active competitor, Susan is currently showing several dressage horses at the national and the FEI levels. She teaches and trains at her lovely Wolfhaven Farm in southern Maryland and heads for central Florida during the winter to provide training for her students and gain easy access to the southeastern winter show circuit.

Susan has successfully coached her eventing students through Advanced, and her dressage students through the FEI levels. Most of her students are serious competitive riders, both professional and amateur. Susan is in great demand as a clinician, thanks to her track record of steering riders toward their full potential. She travels extensively throughout the country and also teaches regularly in Puerto Rico, where she literally introduced the concept of dressage to her students. Starting there from scratch, she has developed an enthusiastic group of budding dressage riders, some of whom aspire to ride in the Central American Games in 2010.

As part of her commitment to giving back to the sport, Susan serves on the Education Committee of USEA. She has also been a member of the USDF Freestyle committee, and has served on the board of directors for the Potomac Valley Dressage Association.
